The HAUNTED Hacienda

"Papacito, Papacito!" Little Pancho Vanilla called one day as he rushed into his yard where his father was snoozing in a hammock. "You must come queekly to defend your honor. Some of my friends have said you are a coward!"

"Caramba!" Papacito exploded, instantly awake. He tumbled from his hammock, striking a pose of haughty dignity. "The pride of the greatest bool fighter in all of Chilivania is wounded! I go to defend my honor, but wait until I get my new bool-fighter's hat."

Mamacita shook a warning finger at Papacito when he darted into their adobe house and clapped his new hat on his head. "Don't you dare lose your new hat," she cautioned. "Eet ees the most beautiful bool-fighter's hat you have ever owned!"

"I weel be careful," Papacito assured her as he dashed outside again.

A short while later, Little Pancho Vanilla and Papacito had joined Pancho's friends outside a mysterious-looking abandoned hacienda. The wind was blowing quite hard, and Papacito was concerned lest it blow his new hat right off his head.

"Er, what are we doing here?" he asked, casting somewhat fearful eyes at the old house which was rumored to be haunted.

"I told my friends you would not be afraid to go into thees haunted hacienda all by yourself!" Little Pancho announced.

Papacito stifled a gasp of dismay, and his bony knees trembled with fright. "All by ... myself?" he gulped hesitantly. "I don't know about that. I have a lot of sleeping to do today, and besides, I do not think ..."

"There, I told you he'd be afraid," one of the little boys whispered to another.

Just then the wind rose to sudden fury, causing a weird shriek to echo through the old hacienda. Thinking it was the cry of a mournful ghost, the group of boys ran off down the empty street as fast as they could ... with Papacito close on their heels.

"Wait!" Papacito called suddenly. "I am going back!"

The amazed boys turned to see Papacito run back up the road and dash into the hacienda without even hesitating.

"You see?" Little Pancho said proudly. "I told you he was not afraid to go into that haunted hacienda all by himself!"

Some time later when Papacito was seen emerging from the hacienda, Little Pancho waved his friends forward. "Come on," he urged, "let's find out how he searched for the ghost in there."

Papacito was full of smiles as the boys ran up to him, and he seemed to be quite relieved about something, too.

"Did you search through every room in the hacienda, or just in the front room?" Little Pancho inquired with wide-eyed admiration.

"Oh, no, I searched through every room," Papacito assured him as he brushed his hat carefully and readjusted it on his head.

Satisfied that his Papacito's honor had been adequately defended, Little Pancho Vanilla skipped merrily away with his friends. "Whenever we find a haunted hacienda from now on, we'll just send for my brave Papacito to explore it," his voice floated back on the wind. "He ees the only one around here who is not afraid of ghosts!"

"Ulp!" Papacito gulped fearfully when he heard this. "I forgot all about the ghost! They did not give me a chance to explain. I went back to the hacienda, not to search for a ghost, but to get my new hat which the wind blew into the house!"
